

EMI and SIPs

Retaining and motivating staff are key issues for many employers. Research in the UK and USA has shown a clear link between employee share ownership and increases in productivity. The government has therefore introduced two ways in which an employer can provide mechanisms for employees to obtain shares in the employer company without necessarily suffering a large tax bill.

The two routes are

- Enterprise Management Incentives (EMI) and
- Share Incentive Plans (SIPs).

EMI allows selected employees (often key to the employer) to be given the opportunity to acquire a significant number of shares in their employer through the issue of options.

A SIP is designed to allow all employees to participate in their business and to encourage long-term shareholding by them.

This factsheet outlines the rules for EMI.

Tax Problems under Normal Rules

If shares are simply given to an employee, the market value of the shares will be taxed as earnings from their employment. This is expensive for the employee as he may not have any cash to pay the tax arising.

In order to avoid this immediate charge, options could be granted to an employee. An option gives the employee the right to obtain shares at a later date. Provided that the terms of the option are that it must be exercised within ten years, any tax liabilities will be deferred until the time the options are exercised.

This may still be expensive for the employee if he is not then in a position to sell some of the shares in order to pay the tax arising.

What Does EMI Offer?

EMI allows options to be granted to employees which may allow the shares to be received without any tax bill arising until the shares are sold.

How does it work?

Selected employees are granted options over shares of the company. The options should be capable of being exercised within ten years of the date of grant.

In order to qualify for the income tax and national insurance contribution (NIC) reliefs, the options awarded need to be actually exercised within ten years of the date of the grant. There is also a statutory limit, which maximises the value of the options which may be granted to any one employee.

What are the tax benefits to employees?

The grant of the option is tax free.

There will be no tax or NICs for the employee to pay when the option is exercised so long as the amount payable for the shares under the option is the market value of the shares when the option is granted.

The EMI rules allow the grant of nil cost and discounted options. However, in these circumstances, there is both an income tax and an NIC charge at the time of exercise on the difference between what the employee pays on exercise and the market value of the shares at the date of grant.

Following the acquisition of the shares, when the option is exercised, an employee may immediately dispose of, or may retain the shares for a period before selling them. At such time there will be a chargeable gain on any further increase in value. The CGT liability will depend on the availability of any reliefs and annual exemption.

For chargeable gains arising on or after 23 June 2010:

- CGT at the rate of 18% applies to gains where net total taxable gains and income are below the income tax basic rate band
- CGT on any part of gains above this limit will be charged at 28%.

Gains that arose in 2010/11, prior to 23 June 2010, are liable to CGT at 18% and are not taken into account in determining the rate at which gains arising on or after 23 June 2010 are charged.

In certain circumstances, regardless of the date of disposal, Entrepreneurs' Relief may be available to reduce the CGT liability to an effective rate of 10%.

What are the benefits to employers?

- Employees have a potential stake in their company and therefore retention and motivation of these employees will be enhanced
- Options will not directly cost the employer any money in comparison to paying extra salary
- There will normally be no NICs charge for the employer when the options are granted or exercised or when the employee sells the shares
- The costs of setting up the option plans should be tax deductible.

EMI: Points to Consider

There are a number of issues to consider in deciding whether EMI is suitable for your company.

- Does the company qualify?
- Which employees are eligible and who should be issued options?
- What type of shares will be issued?
- When will the rights to exercise options arise?

Does the company qualify?

EMI was introduced by the government to help small higher risk companies recruit and retain employees with the skills that will help them grow and succeed.

The company must therefore:

- exist wholly for the purpose of carrying on one or more 'qualifying trades'
- have gross assets of no more than £30 million
- not be under the control of another company (so if there is a group of companies, the employee must be given an option over shares in the holding company).

The main trades excluded from being qualifying trades are asset backed trades such as:

- property development
- operating or managing hotels
- farming or market gardening.

Which employees are eligible and who should be issued options?

An employee cannot be granted options if they control more than 30% of the ordinary share capital of the company. They must spend at least 25 hours a week working for the company or the group, or if the working hours are shorter, at least 75% of their total working time must be spent as an employee of the company or group.

Subject to the above restrictions, an employer is free to decide which employees should be offered options. The sole test is that options are offered for commercial reasons in order to recruit or retain an employee.

What type of shares will be issued?

EMI provides some flexibility for employers. For example, it is possible to limit voting rights, provide for pre-emption or set other conditions in respect of shares which will be acquired on exercise of an EMI option. The shares must, however, be fully paid ordinary shares so that employees have a right to share in the profits of the company.

When will the rights to exercise options arise?

The options must be capable of being exercised within ten years of the date of grant but there does not have to be a fixed date.

Examples of circumstances in which the options could be exercised include:

- fixed period
- profitability target or performance conditions are met
- takeover of company
- sale of company
- flotation of company on a stock market.

Options can be made to lapse if certain events arise, for example the employee leaves the employment.

How abacus can help abacus can help you decide whether EMI is appropriate for your business and whether the business will qualify.

abacus are also able to help you with the necessary documentation required to establish and operate EMI and advice on the costs.

For information of users: This material is published for the information of clients. It provides only an overview of the regulations in force at the date of publication, and no action should be taken without consulting the detailed legislation or seeking professional advice. Therefore no responsibility for loss occasioned by any person acting or refraining from action as a result of the material can be accepted by the authors or the firm.